Queen Mary's Hospital, Charshalton
An Iron Age and Early Romano-British Settlement
By Andrew Powell

Key Features:
· This book describes the results of excavations on a site near the well known Bronze Age ringwork

· A complex series of pit deposits of carefully selected materials including metalwork, ceramics and animal bones, of Iron Age and Romano-British date were found

Excavations just outside a large Late Bronze Age ringwork at Queen Mary's Hospital, Charshalton, in the London Borough of Sutton, revealed a settlement which was occupied possibly continuously from the Early Iron Age into the early Romano-British period. Originally an open settlement, by the Late Iron Age parts of it had been enclosed by an arrangement of small ditches, which underwent some modification over the next two centuries, while keeping their overall layout.

ISBN: 978-1-874350-94-1
BINDING: Paperback
PRICE: £15.00
PUBLISHER: Wessex Archaeology
PAGES: 125
ILLUSTRATIONS: 33 colour/B/W figures and 10 colour plates
SPECIFICATION: 297mm x 210mm
PUBLICATION DATE:
August 1, 2016
READER INTERESTS:
British Archaeology
Roman Britain
NOT FOR SALE:
CA, MX, US